YELLOWSTONE WILDERNESS

ACTIVITY DESCRIPTIONS

Activity Descriptions
Day Hike - Grand Teton National Park	Today, the group will begin to acclimate and explore their new surroundings. Grand Teton National Park is one of the most striking landscapes in the US. The jagged granite mountain tops of the central tetons rise more than 7,000 feet above the rolling buttes and open plains of the Snake River valley. On their day hike, the group will circumnavigate a postglacial lake at the base of the Tetons and venture up into the mountain canyons. It will be a taste of what is to come.
Backpack - Teton Wilderness	The Teton Wilderness lies just east of Grand Teton National Park and Yellowstone National Park. The area is known for its solitude, rolling hills, freshwater lakes, lodgepole pine forests, and a myriad of wildflowers and wildlife. The group will spend seven days hiking along creek drainages, past cowboy camps, and over mountain passes as they make their way towards Yellowstone National Park.
Backpack - Yellowstone National Park	After crossing the national park boundary into Yellowstone, the group will make their way through what is arguably the most remote section of any national park in the lower 48 states. The beauty of the area will be breathtaking. They will hike through wetlands, camp along the Yellowstone River, and finally reach the banks of Yellowstone Lake. Their Wilderness Adventures sea kayaking specialist will be waiting for them to begin the next section of this backcountry adventure.
Sea Kayak - Yellowstone Lake	On their eleventh day in the backcountry, the group will receive a much needed resupply of food and clean socks from a motorboat crew. This resupply will also include a fleet of kayaks that will provide a new mode of travel for the group. Over the next six days, they will wind their way west across the southern part of Yellowstone Lake. They will rise early, paddle on flat water and under clear skies, and then hunker down at campsites for games and campfires in the evenings.
Whitewater Raft - Snake River	After having spent fifteen straight days in the backcountry, even the small town of Jackson Hole will be a culture shock for the group! The students will celebrate their immense accomplishments with the rowdiest section of waves and whitewater that the Snake River has to offer. After splashing through this renowned apline canyon on inflatable rafts, everyone will head into town for their final banquet.
